To provide information to schools about a resource available for school announcements to increase students' awareness of responsible money management.

- The Department of Social Sciences has created "Financial Literacy Tip of the Week" for schools to use during school announcements in order to increase students' awareness of responsible money management through the department's financial literacy education efforts.
 - See the attached elementary or secondary file.
 - In each file, one can find a Financial Literacy Tip that can be read over school announcements. The same tip can be read each day of a given week or schools may opt to announce via Money Mondays or Financial Fridays.
 - Financial Literacy Tips of the Week are also available through the Department of Social Sciences' website: <http://socialsciences.dadeschools.net>. Click on the financial literacy icon found on the homepage.
 - Also available on the department's financial literacy page are 15 lessons per grade level (K-12) designed to provide students with the skills and knowledge they need to become financially literate individuals. Said lessons are tied to national financial literacy standards.
